ROBERT'S SOUL PURPOSE

YOUR SACRED CONTRACT* – AWAKENING YOUR DIVINE POTENTIAL

Your Soul Purpose Chart and Written Analysis Created by Author, Artist and Channel Pamela Wells

Why were you born? Your sacred contract is a snapshot of your greatest gifts, talents and charisma in this lifetime as well as your soul’s challenges and lessons to be learned in order for you to come in alignment with your highest potential and life’s purpose and meaning. Archetypes are aspects of your power.

The 4 archetypes we all have in common are the Victim, the Prostitute, the Child and the Saboteur. Think of them as the 4 legs of the table that hold up your self-esteem. If any of the legs of the table are broken, the table top will not stand. In other words, self-esteem is something you earn as a result of building integrity and becoming congruent with these 4 main archetypes.

All archetypes have a positive power aspect and a disempowering or shadow aspect to them. You become empowered when you “own your own shadow” by shining the light of awareness on your shadow. This can lead to better choices that optimize the power potential or the “gold” of your unique archetypes. Of course, we all share a bit of all archetypes.

What is wonderful about a sacred contract is it gives you a road map to your own particular charisma and can help you make more empowered decisions that are congruent with who you are meant to become.

FIRST HOUSE – PRINCE/PAUPER

The first house is where you lay the groundwork of your life. It is your identity, personality and ego. How you conduct yourself with others, and whether you have the strength to make your way without needing another’s approval depends on how well you have awakened to who you are.

The Prince is a someday ruler to be King. To be a Prince early in life – full of charm, generosity and fairness – is fine but as years go by you may remember again why it is important to fulfill the highest potential of your sacred contract (10th house Rebel). But first you must get back on your horse, throw off your Mother Complex, integrate the divine feminine, and finally answer the question, “For whom does the Grail serve?” (9th house Spirituality).

A Prince is still a boy, or young man, the youngest child of the king or the orphan looking for the meaning of life or looking for the damsel. As many myths suggest, he fails at first because he wears his Mother Complex and does not honor or integrate the power of the dark feminine. A man’s projection of Woman must be corrected and properly integrated before he can finish his journey, answer the question and become a King.
Soul journeys require endurance and depth. So get back on your horse and begin again. To stay a Prince your whole life would be to miss all the wealth that was yours all along.

Helpful books to read about a man’s inner journey would include any book by Robert Johnson, like “He Understanding Masculine Psychology”, “Lying with the Heavenly Woman” and the ”Fisher King and the Handless Maiden” or books by David Deida such as “The Way of the Superior Man”. Also, continue to look into Robert Bly and any activities related to men’s groups.

SECOND HOUSE – ATHLETE/QUITTER

The second house initially represents what is of meaning and value to you in physical form – attachments to money, power and status. The challenge of this house is to ultimately realize that the physical world means nothing if you don’t figure out what really is meaningful to you on the inside.

The key is to balance your exterior world with your inner values. You don’t have to choose one over the other.

The Athlete is strong in spirit, a fierce competitor and never quits. In this house, he would have a strong code of ethics and morality in every thing he does and interact with the physical world in a way that would be direct and powerful. Balanced development of a competitive spirit leads to inner strength, endurance and self-esteem. Athletes proactively strategize and participate in the game of life.

The Athlete in a man could be wounded if his father was insecure, unconsciously thought his son was competition, or didn’t acknowledge his son’s accomplishments. A mother could inappropriately project on her son feminine values that won’t serve him well for manifesting wealth and competing in the physical world.

Ask yourself, “How do I choose to interact with the physical world in a way that empowers me?” If you find that there is a lack of interaction, spiritual meaning or you have given up on what is important to you, then ask in energy terms what in the physical world has drained you of your power or controls you? What do you need the most to feel strong, direct and powerful again in the world?

THIRD HOUSE – VICTIM/GUARDIAN OF YOUR SELF ESTEEM

The third house is about your ability to express yourself in a way that either empowers or disempowers you and others. Because your victim archetype falls in this house, this suggests the way you communicate what you want and what you stand for (who you are) is compromised. Your sense of self-esteem and self-expression in this house contains the lessons of how to effectively wield your own power.

When you expand your energy and your vision you become super spacious and empowered. You have the ability to tap into your unconscious minds desire (12th house – Unconscious Mind – Service to the Divine) to be of service to your souls highest cause. In the Source of all energies you can begin to cultivate the strength, fortitude and commitment to the values you believe in and to what you want in your life (9th house – Spiritual - Faith). This will strengthen your container, boundaries and vessel so you can express yourself honestly and directly in both your music and your relationships. Begin by being open on the inside while holding strong boundaries on the outside so you won't suffer an unending assault on your psyche and sense of self.

Always remember you were not born to suffer for another human begin (12th house - Martyr) but rather to have the courage and stamina to represent a noble cause (10th house Rebel).

The more you are able to be aware of HOW you are being drained of your life force energy (12th house – Gold of the Vampire), the more you need to stand in your own true light with your authentic, strong voice.

As you can stand in a place of inner truth, you will steadily grow stronger and have more energy. As your self-esteem grows you will be able to express your self more directly within the four gates of speech: Truth (is it truthful?), Necessary (is it necessary to say?), Timing (is it appropriate at this time?), and Kind (is it the kind thing to say?).

Being kind means saying what is necessary and truthful even if the other person doesn't like it. Controlling what and how you communicate just so others will approve of you does not serve to empower you or them (7th house Relationships – Sabateur) and (11th house – Vampire/Martyr).

FOURTH HOUSE – MENTOR/MASTER

The fourth house is about how you are connected with the home you came from and your current home. It is also the place you reside inside that is the foundation for your emotional nature. The Mentor is the leading influence on your emotions about what home means to you. For you, home can be a place (outside and inside) for you to pass on knowledge and wisdom to others including yourself. Because you did not come from a home that was healthy it is essential you create a place for yourself (outside and inside) that can ground you and nurture you.

The shadow side of the Mentor is more about imposing control over your emotions and being Master over another person’s mind, body and skills then it is about imparting wisdom.

If your current home is chaotic, reexamine your ROLE with your loved ones. You are a Mentor. A Mentor is not a companion or lover. A Mentor teaches, passes on wisdom and refines a student’s character. The shadow side of the Mentor – a Master - controls and has authority over the unconscious minds of others (students, slaves and servants) by using their intellectual gifts/power and mastery of knowledge in order to get what they want.
A Companion is someone you share your life with.

A Soul Mate is a noble adversary who lets you see the shadow side of your life. They can be a business partner, family member or lover. They are written into your contract to stretch yourself to know your gifts, talents and darkness. They are meant to trigger you to go deep into your soul so you can heal and move forward in a more empowered way.

You don't need a noble adversary in order to reclaim and remember the vast emotional depth you were born with and needed to hide/protect along the way (11th house - Wounded Child).

By reclaiming your souls path (1st house Prince to King) in service to your highest potential (8th, 9th and 10th house) you can reconnect your mind to your heart and find a place inside that feels like home – nurturing, comfortable and safe for you to explore all there is to know and feel. Then you can share your wisdom and knowledge with others at the appropriate level, place and time. (3rd, 5th, 8th, 9th and 10th houses).

FIFTH HOUSE – DREAMER/WISHFUL THINKING

This is the house you rely on the most to make things happen in your life. So think of it as the doorway to your abundance. The Dreamer archetype lets you imagine possibilities beyond the scope of your individual life that benefit all of society.

You have the power to creatively imagine what is just over the horizon and you actively took part in a generation that begin the next evolution of consciousness – that transitional time from the Piscean age to the Aquarian age, from fossil fuel thinking to solar thinking, from material beings to energy beings. You are a first generation energy being. (10th house Rebel)

Think of your dreams like wishes. A Wish is fairy dust and a prayer - they don’t require you to be conscious or invested.

How much do you really want to invest in your dreams? A dream fulfilled through the power of INTENTION is a commitment to become more conscious, work hard as long as it takes and an unwavering belief in your self. It is a time and emotional investment you can track from your the 7th chakra to your 1st. You “invest” in your idea from the 3rd to 1st chakra - where your dream will “cost you” in terms of money, time, emotion and energy.

With your Dreamer archetype you did experience a time of spontaneity, abundance and opportunity. But similar to how the new Age movement was subverted, the challenges of life and your lack of focus and endurance to the cause destabilized your ungrounded passions.

The lesson here is to build your dreams and fortune with a backbone not a wishbone. (1st, 6th, 8th, 9th, 10th houses)
SIXTH HOUSE – POET/STRUGGLING POET

This is the archetype that influences how you seek out paths of security. The challenge of this house is to balance your work and health.

The shadow side of the artist is the Struggling Poet that is struggling to survive. The key is for you to creatively envision a way to ground yourself in your main occupation as a Music and Song Writer in a way that is good for your emotional and mental well-being. So, it is important for you to make choices that do not sabotage your original way of thinking and creativity and that support your emotional peace and mental well-being.

It is good for you to know you have the right occupation but as long as you keep struggling and expecting this occupation to support you financially, your emotional and mental well-being will suffer.

Understand that your greatest potential and abundance is through the optimization of your entire sacred contract through your Rebel/Mystic/Dreamer/Mentor. They give you the visionary capacity and versatility to create unique ways to attract abundance.

For you, physical comfort is not as important as expressing yourself. Still, to have a balanced life, it is important for you to create a safe and peaceful environment for grounding your airy/watery archetypes – however humble – in order for you to feel free to do your creative work.

We are raised to believe that our occupations will buy us what we want. This depends on a person’s contract. In your contract when you struggle to survive you disempower yourself by giving up your freedom of choice. More powerful life choices would fully engage the power of your creative archetypes and put you in alignment with your sacred contract.

You can start by imaging how you can build a life that fills you with passionate energy and enhances your creative potential? What can you let go of that no longer serves you? What drains your energy? What do you sacrifice to feel in control? What do you need to do in order to build your occupation in a way that nurtures the connection between your mind and your heart?

SEVENTH HOUSE – SABOTEUR/GUARDIAN OF CHOICE

The Saboteur is in your house of relationship. The choices you make in your life will either empower or disempower you. If you don’t choose then someone else will make your decisions for you. Why would you give up (sabotage) your power of choice?

Unconscious Choosing:

In the beginning of relationships, we meet people with one or two archetypes. For instance, your Prince (boy) archetype would attract a (girl) or if it were a man you met, a King (work well with a Prince since they don’t threaten them). Your Mentor archetype would attract a Student. Your shadow Master archetype would attract a Shadow Slave or a Shadow Servant and so on.

Over time as relationships evolve shadow archetypes show up and trigger the shadow archetypes in you. If you can integrate your own shadow rather then project it onto another person, conflicts fall away because you are operating at the level of your soul rather then your ego. Co-dependent relationships, for instance, are ego power struggles and almost always continue until at least one person has the courage to break the pattern.

Conscious Choosing:

In the future, choose your relationships CONSCIOUSLY and wisely rather then letting your life “happen” to you. You are the co-creator of your own life and your Destiny. God does his part when you do yours. When you don’t choose, Fate happens.

Pay attention to appropriate boundaries and male/female energy polarities within both men and women and yourself. The key is balance within.

To learn more, become more aware of others archetypes as well as your own. Integrate and learn more about the dark feminine and Mother archetypes within your self rather then projecting these archetypes onto a female companion. EIGHTH HOUSE – MYSTIC/DARK MYSTIC

The eighth house is about mysterious dark secrets related to money, sex and knowledge, money and resources from other people in the form of business or financial partnerships and family resources and your inheritance.

The Mystic archetype seems appealing at first but exacts a high price of arduous hard work, consciousness and personal integrity that few people are willing to pay. A genuine mystical calling manifests as a desire to be of service and is a single minded dedication to spiritual Truth.

People want to be part of supporting your life’s work (Poet, Mentor) when you are of service to them in empowered ways within the framework of your Mystic archetype.

A Mystic is a translator of universal spiritual truths and incorporates wisdom through everything they do. Your Mystic does not have to live in a monastery nor is he required to relinquish the material world unless your contract requires this in order to pursue spiritual practice in alignment with the rest of your sacred contract and highest potential (10th house Rebel). This also becomes clearer if your material world falls away.
The shadow side of the Mystic manifests as a result of the lack of integration with the dark side of the divine masculine or divine feminine. It may appear as a sense of self-importance, knowing it all or taking advantage of students or admirers in economic, emotional or sexual ways.

In the past you have acquired financial support and resources through investors and your parents estate. You will continue to attract other people’s resources (in many forms besides money) and good will if you remain seated in the gifts of your Mystic archetype.

NINTH HOUSE – PROSTITUTE (FEAR)/GUARDIAN OF FAITH

The Ninth and Tenth houses are meant to remind you that your life is a spiritual journey and you are meant to act according to your highest potential. In order to gain access to mystical guidance and wisdom of the Ninth house you must be clear of a challenging past history, develop good self-esteem and become congruent (mind united with the heart). This is because these houses are where your intellectual mind cannot go.

The Prostitute archetype in this house suggests you could have an extraordinary ability to translate mystical truths if you only had enough FAITH but until you deal with your Mother Complex (1st house), build your self-esteem and become integrated and congruent on all 4 legs of the table you will not be able to safely translate mystical wisdom to someone else without compromising yours or their spiritual development. Ask yourself why you lost faith in yourself and God?

So, the first place for you to begin is working with the shadow side of your Martyr and Saint. You need to Fearlessly revisit the suffering, fear of being humiliated and emotions associated with the trauma from childhood to the death of your parents.

The key to your healing is primarily doing this with your intuitive mind NOT your logical mind. Timeline therapy works directly with the unconscious mind. Talk therapy could be very effective for you if done with a very smart, wise male transpersonal therapist who can translate the contents of your unconscious mind and guide you through the hero’s journey. Note: use professionals who are smarter then you and not friends.

A mystical life of service requires endurance and the ability to swim in the sea of unknowing. You do this by building your faith and turning your life over to the will of God.

TENTH HOUSE – REBEL WITH A CAUSE/REBEL WITH A CHIP ON YOUR SHOULDER

This is the house that can lead you to fulfilling your highest potential. When looking at the big picture of your sacred contract and all the gifts and talents you have, it becomes more clear that your destiny is part of a larger cultural movement in the growth of human consciousness. Consciousness is evolutionary so the thought forms that were birthed in the 1960s came from the minds of Rebels like you.
Rebels challenge past tired preconceptions of the limits of human potential. They are people like Martin Luther King, Carl Jung, Van Gogh and John Lennon.

So, all those new ways of thinking from the 60s are still here. The initial burst of crazy energy and ungrounded excitement was needed to birth the movement and plant the seed. Then idealism hit reality and those far-out thought forms are still being refined and strengthened so the larger collective can begin to SLOWLY assemble turquoise awareness into something that changes the trajectory of human history.

The Rebel archetype is full of energy (Athlete), passion (Poet), visionary thinking (Dreamer) and cosmic ideas (Mystic and Saint). Somewhere along the way you lost or gave up your Rebel mojo.

Ask yourself where did your energy go? Where did your passion and fire in the belly go? Where did your visionary enthusiasm and inspirational insight go? Everything is energy so you can follow where you spend your energy currency. Is it invested in the past? Is it in thoughts that disempower you? Is it somewhere in the future in the form of wishful thinking?

The Rebel archetype has great endurance and courage because the collective will push back against new ideas since it fears change and they will target Rebels.

It is important for you to be aware that the nature of your contract gives you the ability to detach and see with your third eye (Saint, Mystic) so you can move forward with your unique and authentic way of expression of your gifts and talents and as a first generation energy being.

ELEVENTH HOUSE – CHILD/Wounded/Eternal/Orphan

How view the world and life in general is connected to this house. This is also how you view the power of your soul (and your personal power) in relation to the whole of life.

From the perspective of the Child archetype the world is an intimidating place and an archetype of very limited power. Your Child archetype is the guardian of your innocence. He lets you know when you are in danger of being violated.

As a child you were often confused and neglected. Because of your mother’s illness and your father’s critical disapproval you didn’t have a real childhood. You were forced to deal with a depressing environment and adult concerns at an early age.

You are grown up now and your childish thoughts are influencing the whole of your life in a disempowering way. Your contract is about bringing the parts of your separate archetypal selves together and engaging both your heart (emotion) and your mind (thought) so you can live an empowered life.

Growing up and perceiving the world as an adult is a much greater place of choice and power for having authority in your life. Perceiving the world as an adult also comes with taking full responsibility for the choices you make and for the choices you DON’T make. This is because when you don’t make a choice or don’t take action you still have made a choice and in such you unconsciously sabotage your ability to make the more powerful choice or action. (Saboteur – 7th House).

Your childhood wound can be still healed. Your orphaned, rebel child is a fast learner and enjoys new intellectual challenges and exploring new perceptions others haven’t tried. Your original mind helps you in your music writing and attracts people to you who want to learn about alternative ways of thinking and universal wisdom. The eternal child keeps you young at heart and gives you the ability to see things with fresh eyes.

The shadow side of your Child Archetype is a fear of growing up. At times when you need to be responsible and dependent you tend to rely on others to take the initiative or you symbolically run away or escape.

- The Wounded Child says I was hurt and now nothing can hurt me as long as I don’t feel it.

- The Eternal Child says my childhood was difficult, depressing and full of responsibility. My adult hood will be done on my terms.

- The Orphan Child says my mother and father weren’t there for me. I will find a way to survive no matter what even if I have to run away from home and escape

Your Shadow child is sometimes depressed and confused because he doesn’t understand why things don’t work out the way he had imagined (5th house) because his intentions are good. He keeps trying to figure out how to fix things but the effort of trying to make it all work right often isn’t worth the effort. Sometimes running away or escaping (addictions and intellectual distractions) from things that bother you is easier then facing them or bringing them to consciousness.

A calling with emotional depth (8th, 9th and 10th Houses) will help you face the challenges of your shadow Child so you can grow into the power and possibilities of adult consciousness. Being conscious (aware) is really about being integrated “having integrity” on all legs of the table. You have been too afraid to act or look at your intuitive/emotional instincts and as a result you have closed yourself off from the potential fullness of your sacred contract. Getting a backbone rather then a wishbone (5th house) and facing those things that make you uncomfortable to deal with directly will build new scaffolding so you can do what you need to do and get on with the business of being a powerful adult with the force of your original thinking changing people’s lives.
TWELFTH HOUSE – VAMPIRE-MARTYR/SAINT

The purpose of the twelfth house is to answer the question, which world will you choose to follow, that of the Divine or that of the earth (your ego)? It is about surrendering to the calling of the voice of the Divine and being able to say “Thy will be done”. This house also points to your innermost fears and has nothing to do with your rational mind.

In order to survive as a child you had to separate your mind and your heart. Your intuitive unconscious mind intention is to make choices that serve your highest purpose. But when you have split off from your emotions, uncovering the meaning behind the unconscious motivations that disempower you will require you to bring together your intuition, intellect and spirit. Doing so has the quality of changing the direction of your life.

Your shadow Martyr archetype uses a combination of service and suffering as a way to control others to get what you want. It works like this: suffering entitles you to feel sorry for yourself because of what you have been through. Because you have suffered you are justified to make others suffer. The price others pay for your suffering is a “Rebellion of unconsciousness” – escaping (responsibility) and running away from things you don’t want to feel or be aware of. Your suffering for others also gives you a reason as to why you are not living the life of your dreams.

When ever self-pity is involved look for the Victim archetype - the guardian of your self-esteem. (3rd house)

The real purpose of suffering for others (See St. John of the Cross) is so that others may be healed through your own mystical transformation. Martyrs/Saints are role models of spiritual devotion, integrity and virtue. Their experience of suffering promotes the collective’s well being. To find your way back to your highest purpose is to be in service to a collective cause you began as a young man. Ask yourself why you have aborted your own mystical transformation? Why are you afraid of your own emotional depths (dark feminine)? Greater understanding of your Mystic (8th house) and Rebel (10th house) archetypes will show you the way.

The role of the Vampire archetype in your unconscious mind is to make you more aware of when people or situations are draining you of your life force energy.

The shadow Vampire in you feeds on other people’s energy and drains them and by controlling their will and power of choice – 5th chakra neck area - through the use of your intellect (3rd house Communication Victim and 4th house Home Master). If you can get someone else is to solve problems, their energy helps feed your own psyche survival.

To be a Vampire is to be in a state of suspended animation because your heart (emotion) is not in this world. It is lurking and unattended to in the dark night. To get back to this world, you need to integrate Her and return the to the original, unlimited source of your own energy (1\textsuperscript{st}, 2\textsuperscript{nd}, 6\textsuperscript{th}, 8\textsuperscript{th} and 10\textsuperscript{th} house) and to the light of day.
